

BSc Box Three: The Badass Security Council of BSc 24

BSc Box Three, also known as the Badass Security Council, is an elite group of students from the BSc 24 class at the University of Oxford. The council is responsible for maintaining order and discipline within the college, and is known for its strict enforcement of the college's rules and regulations.

The council is made up of three members, each of whom is elected by their peers. The members of the council are typically chosen for their strength, leadership skills, and dedication to the college.

BSc Box Three was founded in the early 1900s as a way to maintain order and discipline within the college. The council was originally made up of three male students, but in the 1970s, the council was opened up to female students.
