The friends soon discover that the necklace belongs to a wealthy socialite named Mrs. Van Der Luyden. Mrs. Van Der Luyden is a close friend of Nancy's father, Carson Drew, and she is desperate to get her necklace back.

Nancy, George, and Bess begin their investigation by questioning Mrs. Van Der Luyden's staff. They learn that the necklace was stolen from Mrs. Van Der Luyden's bedroom on the night of a snowstorm. The only person who was in the house at the time was Mrs. Van Der Luyden's maid, Iris.

Nancy, George, and Bess decide to talk to Iris. Iris is a kind and helpful woman, but she is also very nervous. Nancy, George, and Bess try to put her at ease, but Iris is still hesitant to talk. Finally, Nancy gets Iris to open up. Iris tells Nancy, George, and Bess that she saw a strange man in Mrs. Van Der Luyden's bedroom on the night of the snowstorm. The man was wearing a ski mask, and Iris could not see his face.

Nancy, George, and Bess are now convinced that the thief is a man. They decide to search the town for any men who match the description of the man that Iris saw. They soon find a man who fits the description. The man is a drifter named Jack Frost.

Nancy, George, and Bess follow Jack Frost to a local bar. They overhear Jack Frost talking to another man about the necklace. Jack Frost is bragging about how he stole the necklace and that he is going to sell it for a lot of money.

Nancy, George, and Bess know that they have found their thief. They call the police and tell them what they have learned. The police arrest Jack Frost and recover the necklace. Mrs. Van Der Luyden is overjoyed to have her necklace back, and she thanks Nancy, George, and Bess for their help.

Nancy, George, and Bess are proud of themselves for solving their first mystery together. They know that they will continue to investigate mysteries, and they are excited for their next adventure.

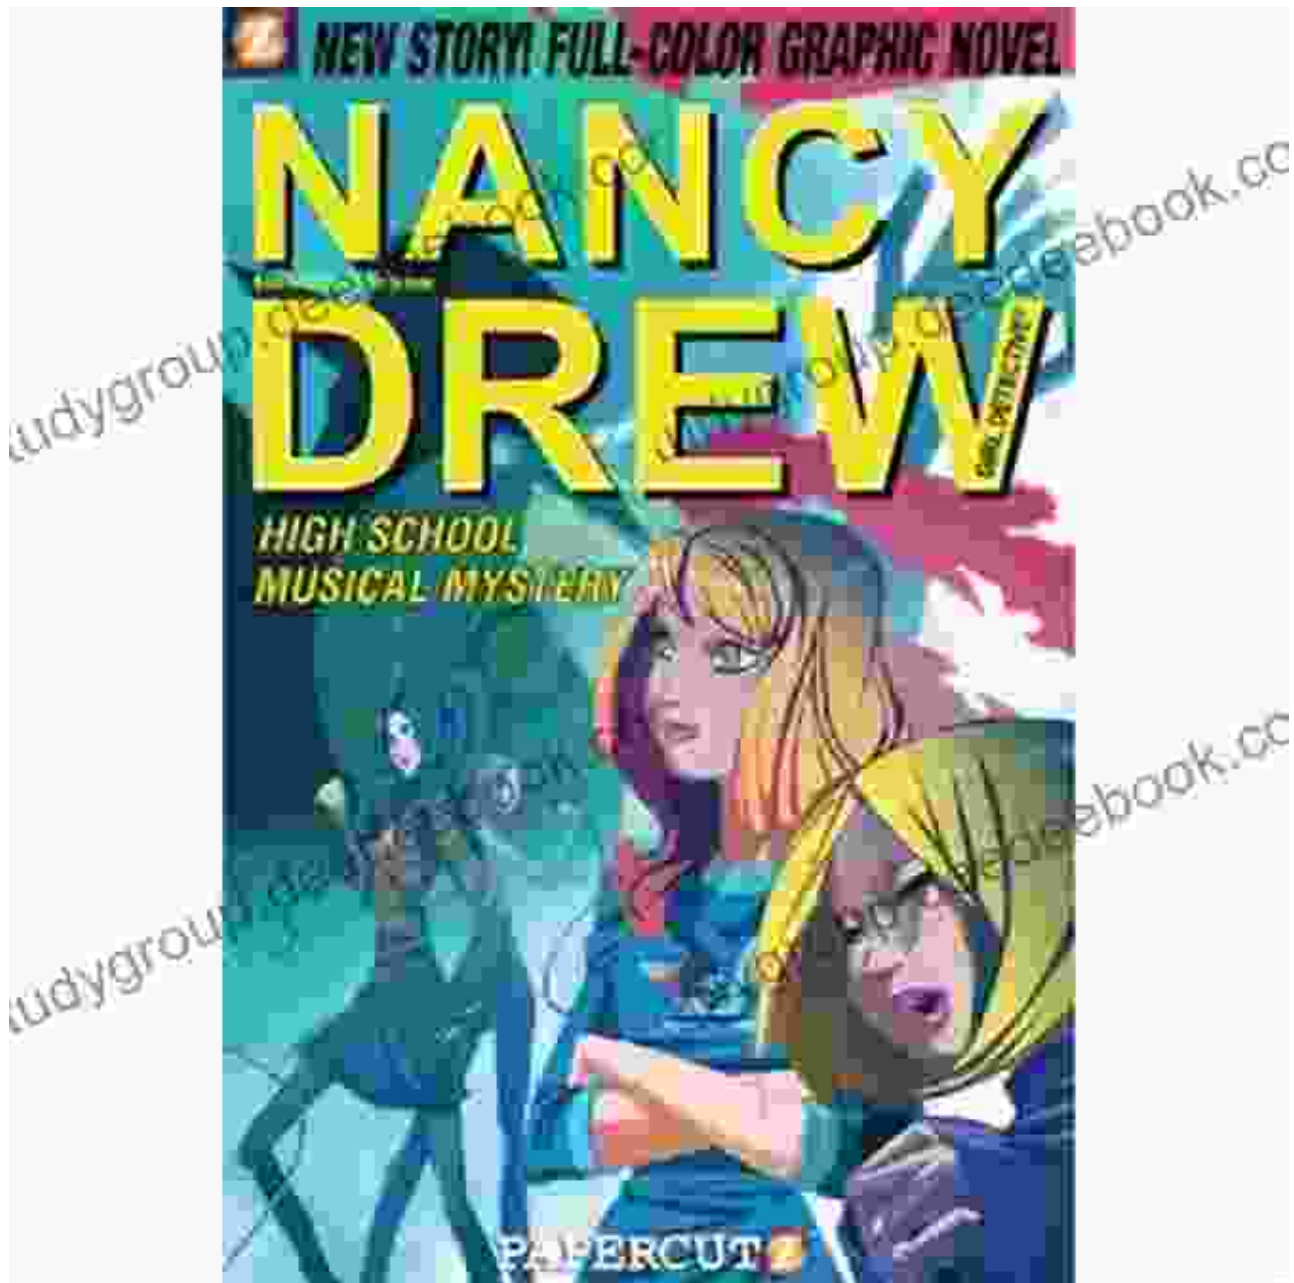

Here are some of the clues that Nancy, George, and Bess used to solve the mystery:

- The anonymous letter
- The missing necklace
- Iris's testimony
- Jack Frost's suspicious behavior

Nancy, George, and Bess are a great team of detectives. They are smart, resourceful, and determined. They are always willing to help others, and they never give up on a mystery.
