

Day of the Caesars Eagles of the Empire 16: A Comprehensive Analysis of a Pivotal Battle in Roman History

The Day of the Caesars, also known as the Battle of Philippi, was a pivotal battle in Roman history that took place on 23 October 42 BC. The battle was fought between the forces of Octavian and Antony, the future emperors of Rome, and the forces of Brutus and Cassius, the assassins of Julius Caesar. The battle was a decisive victory for Octavian and Antony, and it marked the end of the Roman Republic.

In this article, we will take a closer look at the Day of the Caesars, including the background to the battle, the opposing forces, the course of the battle, and the aftermath of the battle.

Background to the Battle

The Day of the Caesars was the culmination of a long and bitter civil war in Rome. The war began in 49 BC, when Julius Caesar crossed the Rubicon River with his army, defying the Roman Senate. Caesar's actions sparked a civil war between his supporters and the supporters of the Senate. The war ended with Caesar's victory in 48 BC, and he was named dictator of Rome.
